

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method and a device for the stimulation of functions for controlling operating sequences are described, the functions accessing at least one global variable of at least one program for control, wherein at least one stimulation function accessing the at least one global variable
5 via at least one software breakpoint is provided.

(Figure 13)